For two fiften-minute halves the eleren from the University fund the selders team from Fort Douglas engged in a gridiron battle on thhe latters field yesterday afternoon and the sudents trimmed the soldiers. It was spacice game and was productive of much good for both sides. Only one goal was made and that by a long end ran just at the call of time for the first half. Neither team put up the fight they are capable of, and of course the Varity boys will not claim the result of the season's victories. One at ass demonstrated to the surprise and delight of the spectators, and that that the soldiers are able take care of themselves. They to take care of themselves. They is layed great speed, strength and engrace, and with a full line up of mean greatly coached should hold their with the best teams in the state. the 'Varsity team, Bennion and erts showed up with their old-time the balance of the players im but the balance of the players and yet in good shape and the team was rather on the ragged edge. It had an advantage over the solies in many respects and while they we able to make numerous good gains the line the soldiers did not bucking the line, the soldiers did not to much headway in that respect The pigskin became lost several times through the fumbling of players on both sides, but this will be overcome when the boys get down to more steady ntice. One disagreeable feature was failure to have the gridiron propermarked, and many times it was diffiand sometimes impossible to deterthe whether the necessary five yards mals," said B. B. Heywood, United States marshal of Salt Lake City, at the Windsor hotel, "reminds me of one of the wisest mules I ever saw and which sold a few days ago, because he was too wise a brute for me. Would you be-lieve it, I had been feeding that lazy scoundrel for more than a year before I discovered that he was working me. About six weeks ago I went on the range to look after a herd of horses and cattle. The range riders asked me for a few mor horses for herding purposes and I told them to use the mule I spok of, a big, strong, black beast called Chi cago. "Well it happened they used him two days each week, Tuesdays and Fridays After the second week old Chicago dis-covered the system and knew when hi days of labor were due. On Tuesday morning of the third week, when the boys got up to saddle their mounts they couldn't find Chicago. Of course there was nothing to do but to get another mount, which was done, after the drov had been in motion about half an hour we heard a hee-hawing half a milwe heard a hee-having half a line away and pretty soon Chicago came running up and took his place with the herd. The following Friday the same thing was repeated. In the early morn-ing he was missing, but turned up after we had started again.

"'Ah, ha' said I, 'you've worked this game long enough, old boy,' and the next Monday night I picketed him out. But say, it was worth a fortune to have seen the disappointed expression on that mule's face when I tied the rope around his neck. He turned his head partly around and watched me intently; one of his ears dropped and his tail hung like a whipped dog's. He attempted to edge over towards me when he thought I wasn't looking, and I believe he would have tried his heels on me had. I given him an opportunity. After that every time I approached him he'd drop his ear and give a look which said, Til get you yet, doggone you,' so that I thought the safest thing I could do was to sell him, and I did. I have been praying ever since that his owner w have no bad luck, but a trade's a trade you know, and I assume no respon-bility.—Denver Post.
